Questionnaire

The result of a questionnaire recently sent out to a number of libraries with a view to determining opinion on the policies of the Cumulative Book Index has proved of considerable interest to us. We reprint the questions with an analysis of fourteen replies. Any others who would like to express their opinions are asked to write to us.

1. A great many of the publishers have recently made changes in their price lists. Many of the books were recorded in the United States Catalog and some in the annuals of the Cumulative Book Index. Is it better to reenter these books with an author entry only in the next annual of the Cumulative Book Index, or is it better to print a separate author list for such books?

In answer to the above question one stated a preference for a separate monthly list; one asked for a separate author list that might be pasted in the front of the volume; Ten preferred the present method of reentering.

2. Might the United States government and state publications and miscellaneous pamphlets of minor importance be omitted without impairing the usefulness of the Index?

To this question six gave an unqualified Yes; five an unqualified No; while three said yes to the omission of government and state publications, no to the omission of pamphlets.

3. Do you use the library of Congress card numbers?

Answers: Yes, 11; No, 3.

4. Is the including of announced works a useful feature?

Answers: Yes, 7; No, 7. One of the latter was an emphatic NO!!

5. In regard to the problem of placing the information regarding books under the real name or pseudonym, it is our custom to use the pseudonym if it is better known than the real name, unless the author writes under both the real name and the pseudonym in which case it is our custom to enter all books under the real name. Since the use of the pseudonym is very likely to be temporary and the tendency is to change eventually to the real name, we sometimes anticipate this change, and use the real name before it has come into equal popularity with the pseudonym. We shall be glad if those who have used the catalog will inform us whether they approve this practice and if not, in what respect we should change.

Five answered Yes, giving their approval to present practice; two were indifferent; six stated a preference for the real name; one voted for the pseudonym, but added that her head cataloger preferred the real name.

6. The Cumulative Book Index, which was the first publication of a bibliographical character undertaken by this company, has always proved to be the most exacting and expensive one, and this expense has never been adequately covered by revenue. With the ever-increasing number of books published in this country, the problem of how to make the income meet the ever-increasing cost has been one of the most serious matters before us. It seems that before long we shall be obliged either to curtail the service or increase the subscription price. The last annual number contains more than 800 pages set in nonpareil type, nearly twice as much typesetting as is required for a volume of an ordinary encyclopedia. Most of this matter has been reprinted and delivered several times. We now wish to inquire of subscribers whether they would prefer some curtailment of service or an advance in the subscription price.

Eleven reported in favor of an advance in price; two preferred curtailment; one would dispense with announcements rather than meet an increase in price.

The answers in the last case are particularly gratifying in their expression of good will. We cannot forbear quoting one or two. One says: "We must have it, no matter what it costs, and do not wish any curtailment of service." Another says: "The foregoing answers may be taken as expressing the opinion of this library. We appreciate so fully the work you are doing for libraries and the fairness and reasonableness of your handling of the business relations of your publications from the point of view of libraries that we are willing to agree to anything that you may find necessary and that meets the need of libraries generally." Another writes: "Could not do with less information, so advance in price seems the only thing," and adds the touching postscript, "Too bad libraries are so poor."

Abbreviations of Publishers' Names.

Abbreviations of publishers' names will be found in the Publishers' Directory at the end of the Index. This directory is revised with each number of the Index and the latest issue should be consulted for addresses.

Names Used as Headings.

Entitles are made preferably under the author's real name, but under the pseudonym, when the real name is not known or rarely used, under names of editors of compilations; under names of countries, states or cities which are treated as authors of their publications and of law reports, under names of societies or conventions, as authors of their transactions, journals, reports, and collections, under names of churches as authors of liturgies, hymn-books, catechisms, etc. (local churches, under name of place); under Bible when the book is a text or a paraphrase of any part of the Bible. Entries are made under the first word of the title, not an article, of anonymous works, compilations published under collective titles, periodicals, and year-books. Translations, abridgments, and indexes, are put under the original work.

Parts of Names Used as Headings.

English compound names are put under the first part. English surnames beginning with a prefix are put under the prefix; in French names, under the prefix excepting the preposition de and d'; in all other languages and in French names beginning with de or d', under the name following the prefix. British noblemen are put under their titles; bishops under their family names; members of royal families, canonized persons, and members of religious orders under their first names.

Prices.

Educational and technical books, and other books sold at a limited discount and commonly known as net books have an asterisk (*) before the price.

When a price is changed, the book is recatalogued and designated (corr. price) in the current number of the Index whatever may be the date of its publication.

Library of Congress Cards.

Numbers to be used in ordering the printed catalog cards of the Library of Congress are given at the end of the main (author) entry of each book. In many government publications, however, for which only subject entries are given, these numbers are attached to the subject entries.

When a book is entered before the Library of Congress card number can be procured, it is reentered in a succeeding issue of the Index with the order number attached. It will be necessary, for example, to look in the current issues of the Index for the numbers of some books that were published in the preceding year and catalogued in the Index for that year.

In ordering cards by these numbers, the numbers should be arranged in columns in increasing order of the numbers. The number of copies wanted should be indicated after the card numbers with a slanting line between, e. g., 5-2850/4. The price of cards ordered by number is 2c. for the first copy and 7/10c. for each additional copy. For further information apply to the Card Section of the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.
